floods, hurricanes and other Acts of God. During the recent flood in the Ohio and Mississippi Valley sections wire systems of applicant were inoperative over areas ranging in distance from 15 to 20 miles. This is to be one of several stations, the equipment for which is to be stored at strategic locations and in the event of an emergency this station with others will be set up to supplement prostrated wire systems for the period of emergency.

B. General Experimental Stations:

The station proposed herein is to be used to replace existing wire systems in the event that due to emergency conditions wire systems become inoperative. Although used for public service no specific charge will be made for the use of this station, the rates being the normal rates as set forth in the published tariffs of applicant for the various points concerned.

The stations are desired in order to provide more efficient telegraph service during periods of wire prostrations due to floods, hurricanes and other Acts of God. During the recent flood in the Ohio and Mississippi Valley sections wire systems of applicant were inoperative over areas ranging in distance from 15 to 20 miles. This is to be one of several stations, the equipment for which is to be stored at strategic locations and in the event of an emergency this station with others will be set up to supplement prostrated wire systems for the period of the emergency. An exception is sought under Rule 320 which will permit a general message traffic to be conducted enabling the applicant to obtain information and data in order to determine if the ultra high frequencies will be useful during emergencies.

Nature of Experimentation:

(a) To develop equipment that will supplement wire service during periods of prostration and to develop the application of printer equipment to radio service.

(b) Through the use of experimental frequencies in the ultra high frequency region, applicant expects to develop equipment suited to the needs of an emergency service. The equipment to be designed to be thoroughly portable and readily welded into a wire system in time of stress.

(c) Applicant's Engineers have carried on research and developmental work in connection with cable and wire systems, some of the principles of which it believes are applicable to radio problems. Applicant has had an Electronics Laboratory located at Water Mill, L. I., for a period of over 10 years which laboratory has been devoted to the problem of keeping applicant informed of radio progress and the developments therein that were applicable to cable and wire line problems.

(d) At the Water Mill Laboratory, there is a staff of graduate engineers who have had experience along lines mentioned in (c) above and many of whom personally have had experience in commercial, amateur and reserve forces of the Army and Navy.
